Dr. Lim is an Associate Professor and Acting Associate Dean, Teaching and Learning at the IMU University, Malaysia. She is an associate member of the Malaysian Biomedical Science Association, the Pan-Asian Biomedical Science Consortium (PABSC) and World Union for Herbal Drug Discovery (WUHeDD) and has co-organised several international/national biomedical and medical education conferences. She actively mentors, lectures, and co-leads academic quality management initiatives at her university, including securing the Institute of Biomedical Science (IBMS) UK accreditation for the IMU Biomedical Science degree programme. A recipient of the National Science Fellowship, she interned at the Mt. Sinai School of Medicine, NYC, on liver fibrosis research. She has published in reputable journals, presented at international conferences as an invited speaker, supervised more than 58 undergraduate and postgraduate students, and secured four national grants as principal investigator to date. Her research interests and current work include natural product bioactivity, including photoprotection by Antarctic microalgae extracts, and nanoplastic neurotoxicity.
